Follows Closely That of the Royal Duke at Metropolitan Museum.

The number of Van Dyck portraits in America has recently been increased by five canvases purchased from the Earl of Denbigh by Lewis & Simmons of this eity. The pictures have been placed upon public view in the firm's galleries.

The work that no doubt will provoke the next discussion is the full length of the properties of the proper

The work that no doubt will provoke the most discussion is the full length of James Stuart. Duke of Richmond, for it follows closely the pose and color of the famous Duke of Richmond that has so long ornamented the Metropolitan Museum of Art. In the newly arrived picture, as in that at the Metropolitan, there is the same big dog with the caresing hand of the Duke laid upon it, the same sienderness in face and figure given to the royal personage, the same fair curls, the great cloak with the timmense silver star rounding over the arm and all the other well known accessories.

Agreed it will be centrally located in Manhattan. It will be a community playhouse, where the performances will be both acted and staged by amateurs, o and its purpose will be to cultivate the strammatic instinct and, as Mrs. Helmont says, to make amateur productions not alone a means of pleasure to the plays to the actors and their audiences.

Mrs. Belmont also amounces the next two plays to be given by the league will be William Gillette's "Held by the Ememy" and "The Woodland Princess" by Louise Perkins.

The new playhouse when completed will be the headquarters for the league and will house its library of plays and works on plays, which will be at the community to the actors and the performances will be both acted and staged by amateurs, o and its purpose will be a community playhouse, where the performances will be both acted and staged by amateurs, o and its purpose will be a community playhouse, where the performances will be be both acted and staged by amateurs, or and its purpose will be a community playhouse, where the performances will be both acted and staged by amateurs, or and its purpose will be a community playhouse, where the performances will be both acted and staged by amateurs, or and its purpose will be a community to the familian productions not alone a means of pleasure to the plays and amateur productions not alone a means of pleasure to the plays and alone a means of pleasure to the plays and amateur productions not importation will be impelled to restudy the Van Dyck in the museum. Meantime it may be left to antiquaries to decide which picture antedates the other.

Another portrait is that of the Duchess of Richmond, who is shown with her dwarf. Mrs. Gibson. The Duchess is in the act of taking a glove from a salver held up to her by the dwarf, the background being architectural, with a glimpse of landscape.

Queen Henrietta Maria is another of the sitters. The fourth is a portrait of an unknown lady and the fifth is a head of King Charles. All of these paintings have been shown at the Royal Academy in London at various times.

Reden's Lithographs.

A phase of the art of Odlion Redon that is less known in America than it should be, his lithographs, is on exhibition to the public in the Ardsley Studios, at 110 Columbia Heights, Brooklyn. Redon was practically made known to us at the Lexington Armory show of modern art, and his was one of the most ed successes in that exhibition th with the press and the buying pub-

The imaginative power of his worl compelled his admirers to go back as far as Blake in the effort to find a fitting comparison, and in addition to the mean-ing of his lines. Redon had the power to t a strange and unearthly beauty in color. The lithographs now on view long to Hamilton Easter Field. They have lovely qualities as lithographs, as well as the characteristic imaginative traits for which Redon is famous. A dozen paintings by Bryson Bur-roughs, decoratively illustrating classic Breek legends, are being shown at the

Peter Brenghel's Work.

An unusual work by Peter Breughel the elder, "Christ Driving the Merchauts from the Temple," is the centre of at-iraction in a group of paintings, most of them by little known masters, now on lew in the Satinover Galleries. As here are innumerable personages in the pleture and innumerable incidents,

As an artist he never was especially estrained by refinement, and the queamish who peer too closely into all he doings of these medieval folk are liable to receive shocks here and there.

For they are mediaval, these folk, Breughel makes no pretence of getting into the period, and Christ is portrayed just as He would have been had He been emporary of Breughel. The stupid en from the fantastic temple appear to have no realization that they have been convicted of sin, but raise their hands in protest at what they consider a fanatic interruption.

GEN. VILJOEN, BOER LEADER, DIES AT 48

La Masa, N. M., Jan. 14.-Gen. Benja min Viljoen, one of the foremost figures in the Boer war and the captor of Dr Jamieson, the South African raider, died of pneumonia at his home here to-day.

For fifteen years he had made his home on this continent, part of the time in the United States, but for some time in Mexico, where he was the chief mili-tary advisor of Francisco I. Madero dur-ing the Madero revolution.

He was 48 years old and was born in Eastern Cape Colony of South fever and joined the rush of argonauts to the Rand. He had little success, so in 1890 he entered the service of the Boer Government as assistant public prosecu-

of the world as the captor of Dr. Jamie son, the South African raider. Mean time he had entered the army and he rose to high rank. He took part in several local wars and then served through the Boer struggle against England as Assistant Commandant-General. He stored many famous victories during this struggle.

After the war he was sentenced to banishment to St. Helena for life by the British, but in 1992 he was paroled and after a short visit came to America. He in the hope that an arrangement the Mexican Government for a Boer colonization scheme would go through, but this hung fire.

Then with Cronje he joined the Boer exhibit at the St. Louis exposition, and afterward toured the country in a show which reproduced some of the incidents of the Boer war. He married in 1905 Mrs. Myrtle Dickerson Lowden of St. Louis. This was his econd marriage.

In February, 1915, he was arrested in Los Angeles charged with having pro moted military operations in Mexico on American soil. Nothing came of this, and then he went to his ranch in New Mexico. Ills son is now in Mexico with Gen. Pershing.

Count von Sierstorpff many years ago was well known in New York and Newport. He married an American girl. Miss Mary Knowlton of Brooklyn.

The Count had spent several summers visiting in Newport, and it was there he met Miss Knowlton. They were married on April 26, 1892, in a fashionable ceremony in her home at 201 Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, which was formerly the residence of the late Seth Low.

Miss Knowlton was the only daughter Miss Knowlton was the only daughter of Edwin H. Knowlton, who died about five years after his daughter was married. He left a substantial fortune, about $750,000, to the Countess. Since her marriage the Countess returned to this country but seldom. She met with the same social success in Ger-many that she had here, and in the fall of 1911 the Kaiser was her guest in her castle Zyrowa in Silesia, the ancestra ome of her husband's family for many undreds of years.
